OTHER PUBLICATIONS

Irwin, K.D. et al. (1996), "A hot–electron microcalorimeter for X–ray detection using a superconducting transition edge sensor with electrothermal feedback," Nucl. Instr. Methods Phys. Res. A 370:177–179.

McCammon, D. et al. (1991), "Cryogenic Microcalorimeters for High Resolution Spectroscopy: Current Status and Future Prospects," Nucl. Phys. A527:821c–824c.

Mosley, S.H. et al. (1984), "Thermal detectors as x–ray spectrometers," J. Appl. Phys. 56(5):1257–1262.

Nagel, U. et al. (1994), "Proximity Effect in Iridium–Gold Bilayers," J. Appl. Phys. 76:4262–4271.

Nahum, M. and Martinis, J.M. (1995), "Hot–electron microcalorimeters as high–resolution x–ray detectors," Appl. Phys. Lett. 66(23):3203–3205.

Peacock, A. et al. (1996), "Single optical photon detection with a superconducting tunnel junction," Nature 381:135–137.

Twerenbold, D. et al. (1996), "Detection of single macromolecules using a cryogenic particle detector coupled to a biopolymer mass spectrometer," Appl. Phys. Lett. 68:(24):3503–3505.

Welty, R.P. and Martinis, J.M. (1991), "A Series Array of DC Squids," IEEE Trans. on Magnetics 27(2):2924–2926.