(57) ABSTRACT

A portable potty includes a seat member, a first support member connected to the seat member, a second support member connected to the first support member, and a third support member connected to the second support member. The portable potty can be repeatedly and reversibly transformed from a collapsed position to a constructed position. When the portable potty is in the collapsed position, the first support member and the second support member are stacked substantially parallel with respect to an adjacent member, in a vertical direction. When the portable potty is in the constructed position, the seat member is disposed perpendicular to the first, second and third support members such that a space is formed, the space being bordered by the first, second and third support members.
