

[54] SURGICAL BAG FOR SPLENORRHAPHY

[76] Inventor: Barry R. Ellman, 254 Stratton Rd., Rutland, Vt. 05701

[21] Appl. No.: 348,976

[22] Filed: Feb. 16, 1982

[51] Int. Cl.³ A61B 17/12

[52] U.S. Cl. 128/334 R; 128/303 R; 128/325

[58] Field of Search 128/1 R, 303 R, 325, 128/334, 335.5

[56] References Cited

U.S. PATENT DOCUMENTS

2,143,910	1/1939	Didusch	128/335.5
3,983,863	10/1976	Janke et al.	128/1 R
4,217,890	8/1980	Owens	128/303 R

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

De Mueles et al.—Annals of Thoracic Surgery—vol. 16, No. 2, Aug. 1973, pp. 199–200.

Lahey Intestinal Bag—1959 Daud Rubber Co. Catalogue, p. 24.

Buntain et al., Surgery, Nov. 1979, pp. 748–760.

Primary Examiner—Dalton L. Truluck

[57] ABSTRACT

A surgical net bag for encapsulating a fractured organ during surgical repair. The bag is provided with multiple drawstrings to aid in conforming the bag to the organ for applying thereto substantially uniform pressure to obtain hemostasis. The bag is especially useful for surgical repair of fractured spleens.

5 Claims, 4 Drawing Figures

