

means for creating a plurality of windows on the display screen;
 means for inputting data or commands to any one of windows created on the display screen;
 interface means for establishing a communication path for communicating between the station and one of the other stations through said communication network; and interlocution control means for logically forming on said communication path an interlocution path for coordinating one of said windows created in the display screen of the station and one of said windows created in the display screen of said one of the other stations in response to a first command, and for releasing an interlocution path established on the communication path in response to a second command;

20

25

30

35

40

45

50

55

60

65

said interlocution control means including means for intercepting data or a command inputted to any one of windows by a user with said input means, means for checking whether or not an interlocution path exists in relation to said one window to which said data or command was inputted and for transmitting said intercepted input data or command to said communication path through said interface means if the interlocution path exists, and means for receiving data or a command generated at said one of the other stations through said interface means and said communication path and for selectively supplying said intercepted data or command inputted from said input means and said data or command received from said interface means to one of said application programs running in the windows.

* * * * *